SLAY SHOT IN ABDOMEN; DIES AT HOSPITAL

Is Found in Scottdale Pipe
Mill Yard by Watchman.

SAYS HIGHWAYMEN FIRED SHOT

Makes Statement That Men Held Him
Up on Kiefertown Bridge, He Says
Still on Body, However; Brother Is Brooklyn, Notified; Other News.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTSDALE, July 18.—Alex Peters, a Slav, who came to Scottdale on Saturday evening in a buggy, was found by Pipe Mill Police on Kiefertown bridge, in the yard of the pipe mill. He was shot in the abdomen by highwaymen. He was taken to the Memorial hospital at Mount Pleasant, where he died yesterday morning.

The shooting remains a mystery to the local police, as the only statement made by Peters was in the ambulance while being driven to Mount Pleasant. He said he was on the Kiefertown bridge when two men approached him and asked that he give them any money that he had, and they shot him.

Chief of Police Frank McCudden found $75 on his person and this discounts the story that he was held up.

Yesterday McCudden visited his room at Mount Pleasant and found it almost bare.

The bullet went through the stomach, punctured the intestines in two places, and also the liver and kidneys.

The body was removed to the Ferguson funeral parlors at Scottdale. An address of a brother in Brooklyn was found by Chief McCudden and a message was sent to him.

Peters has the appearance of a man 37 years old, and was well dressed.

Give Band Concert.
The Scottdale Military band gave a very pleasing concert at Leasda park last evening to a large crowd. This is the second of the Military band's concerts and both times they have drawn a large crowd. They are held after the time of the church services in town.

Jacob Andrew Highberger, aged 38 years, died at his home at Leasda park on Saturday afternoon. Funeral services will be held at the Hunter church this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mr. Highberger was a native of Lebanon, Pa., and was survived by a wife and eight children.

Funeral services will be held at the second time at St. John's church on Sunday for Joseph O'Donnell and Marie Eckman, of Evansburg, Pa. Virgil Greene, of Cumberland, Md., and Helen Eckman, of Evansburg, Pa., were the bridesmaids. Mr. and Mrs. Eckman of Evansburg, Pa., were the bridesmaids. The ceremony was a double wedding. ## School for Rural Pastor at State College Next Month

Special to The Courier.

STATE COLLEGE, July 18.—The 15th annual school for rural ministers will be held at the Pennsylvania State College for three weeks, beginning Monday, August 1. This is the only school of its kind held in Pennsylvania and it will be attended by approximately 200 pastors from country districts. The Rural Life Department of the college is cooperating with interchurch organizations in holding the event as a feature of the college summer session. The various church denominations will meet the expenses of those who attend and the college provides the lectures and instruction.

The aim of the conference is to train country ministers in methods of community endeavor that they might better understand present day problems. In addition to Bible study, the school will touch such topics as the organization and work of the rural church; Sunday school methods; allied rural agencies; rural leadership and the church and community. Practical church field workers will conduct the principal classes.

STUPID YANKEES LOSE IN BALTIC

Unbelievable Ignorance Is Costing Them the Trade of the New States Over There.

FAIL TO GET BIG ORDERS

British, German and Dutch Firms Are Getting Millions of Dollars Because They are Better Informed Than the American Business Men.

Riga, Latvia.—Millions of dollars in ready cash are going to England, Germany and Dutch firms from the Baltic states because of the almost unbelievable unfamiliarity of even the largest American firms with foreign trading conditions, and even geography, say Americans here.

Dozens of big orders for which cash was actually in the banks in New York have been lost to American because of what American representatives in the Baltic states term absolute stupidity.

"It is said," said one of these Americans in Riga, who has had to place many orders in Germany and in England, when America could have had them, "that the heads of American firms realize what the substantial inroads of their foreign trading departments are doing to them."

"Most of them, brought up on so-called American efficiency systems that may work well at home but are absolutely hopeless abroad, try to do business in Europe according to form. They form 24 or whatever form they would apply to similar deals in America."

Cables for Reference.
"To illustrate, not long ago I had an urgent cash order for 40,000 suits of underwear for a Baltic state. I telegraphed to a big American firm. 'What your price $10,000 suits heavy underwear cash against documents New York?'

"Two or three days later, when some bright young credit man had tried to digest this telegram, I received a cable saying: 'Wire your credit rating and references.'

"Now, I suppose his form 27 required him to do that, but I wired back. My credit references are cash in New York bank. What are your prices?'

"Some days later I received a telegram saying: 'Price dollar twenty, or something like that.'

"More valuable time was lost in an exchange of cablegrams asking what they meant, per garment or per suit. The result was that I wired an English firm. My answer from it was complete, just what I wanted. The telegram gave the price per suit, weight of shipment, probable date of delivery and everything that I wanted to know. The English firm got the order and took the cash in the New York bank."

"When I write American firms for catalogs, I get catalogs without prices. I suppose they think it is undignified to print them. Then I write for price lists and get price lists without catalogs."

Print Complete Catalogs.
"German or British firms print complete catalogs giving just what one wants to know. They save valuable weeks of mail correspondence and not the orders."

Another American in trade in Riga showed the correspondent a letter from one of the biggest oil companies in America, in reply to his telegram which said: "Quote me price refined coal oil delivered Riga." The answer read: "Crude oil has gone up 20 cents a barrel."

"Now," said this American dealer, "don't want to know about crude oil and I haven't time to figure out what effect a rise in its price would have on coal oil that was badly wanted by my buyer."

"In many of such ridiculous cases I have telegraphed directly to the heads of firms in America explaining the situation. But I haven't the time to write all of them. So the Germans and English get the orders."

Incidentally, perhaps half of the letters sent by American firms to the Baltic states bear only 2-cent postage stamps, causing indignant prospective buyers to dig down in their pockets to pay postage due in rubles or marks or whatever the unit happens to be.

Some of them bear fantastic addresses, such as "Riga, Russia, via the Pacific." One letter in reply to request to ship for cash a big consignment of goods from New York to Riga said the firm was sorry, "but had no shipping facilities on the Pacific."

GERMANS DIG TO FIND LEGENDARY BURIED CITY

Marvelous Story of Credulity in a Myth Comes From Muschaken in East Prussia.

From the little town of Muschaken in East Prussia, near the Polish border, comes a story that rivals the wildest tales of the Red Fairy Book of childhood days.

It is said that thousands of Germans of the district are making their way to the so-called Golden Mountains, under which is supposed to lie a 2,000-year-old buried city, hidden by enchantment, inhabitants of which will overwhelm with gold any one liberating them.

The legend, known for years among the natives, has just been revived by an old man who says that since last October he has been visited each night by the ghosts of three of the inhabitants, who come to plead for release. The legend runs that the people of the city were all bewitched by the devil because they were too greedy for gold, and so never he awakened until this local devil has been driven away.

According to reports, the inhabitants of Muschaken have taken the story seriously, and are now digging for gold on the mountain side. New pilgrims arrive daily from all parts of the vicinity to join in the search.

ONE OF 25 MOST BRILLIANT MINDS IN UNITED STATES

Once a lumberjack, a longshoreman and a jack-of-all-trades, Michael J. Nolan has been said by a college professor to have "one of the 25 most brilliant minds in the country." Today he is studying engineering at the University of Washington, having been sent as a wounded veteran by the federal board for vocational training.

His previous schooling consisted of passing seven grades in Irish grammar school. And here's what he's doing: Qualified as an expert bacteriologist, six weeks after entering a hospital as a patient; scored 100 percent in the U. S. navy intelligence test; scored 211 out of a possible 212 in the army Alpha intelligence test, requiring but 14 of the allotted 17 minutes; and scored to check his answers, answered all of Edison's questions but four.

Ancient Jazz

Little improvement has been made in the construction of the saxophone since the days when the ancient harpist tuned his lyre with animal hoofs. From the beginning the impact of the hammer or the plucking sound of the string or the noise of the mallet on dulcimer strings was louder than the sustained tone following.

"This same defect remained in the clavi-chord and harpsichord and in the old-fashioned square piano," says Mr. Frank Baecher, Vice President, American Steel and Wire Company.

"The piano makers up to that time thought it was necessary to have a very hard wire of high tension, but it has been proven by our acoustic engineers that a softer wire having sufficient tension strength without extreme hardness—a quality of toughness and a higher elastic limit—produces no inharmonics when drawn to a tension of about 150 pounds, and this results in a better sustained tone than the sounds derived from the harder, stiffer wire, which in order to prove effective had to be drawn to a tension of over 200 pounds.

"The result of the adoption of this wire is a tone whose composition is such as to be grateful to the ear and which has come to be known as the American tone.

"American pianos are now the standard of the world owing to this mellow tone quality."

AND so we are going to be farmers too and will you come and visit us so we can have some advice about planting the garden and so forth," read Roger.

"Well," he exclaimed, "My Cousin Gert says they've bought a farm fifteen miles north of Great Barrington and they want me to visit them."

"Fine!" cried Roger's mother. "So it was that Gertrude and her brother, might have been seen at the depot, a few weeks later, sitting in their father's car. With them were two city friends who were visiting them."

"Cousin Roger is a dandy fellow," explained Gert's brother, "and he's kind of a diamond in the rough."

"He is!" cried Gert. "He's a real diamond!"

Just then the train came puffing in and Gert and Joe jumped out of the car to look for Roger. In a minute they saw him.

"Hello there!" he cried. "Wait a second. I've brought something for you."

Both cousins looked pleasantly expectant while Roger went to the baggage room. Soon he returned carrying one and of a good-sized crate while a man helped with the other. In the crate was something alive.

"What is it?" cried Gertrude. "Look and see!" replied Roger.

Gert did look and gave a cry of dismay, which she tactfully turned into a laugh, so as not to hurt her cousin's feelings.

"It's Bella," said Roger, with pride. "You can't farm up this way without raising pork."

The city visitors in the car put their handskerchiefs to their noses and did not seem a bit pleased when they learned that they were to share their ride with a pig.

"My! My! quite disagreeable and sulky too," but Gert took Roger's arm and said: "It was awful good of you to give us such a fine pig."

"There's no story or anything for a pig at our farm," remarked Joe.

"But the barn is good and roomy," put in Gertrude, "only the door's off."

"Well," Roger replied, "I guess Bella can get along until we make her a sty. What she really likes is to be out in a clover field."

"Where'd you get her, Rog?" asked Joe.

"I raised her myself," was the proud reply.

"Welcome!" cried Aunt Gertrude, opening the front door wide. "Well! What have you there?"

"A gift from Roger," explained Joe, in a slightly sarcastic way.

"Oh dear me!" his mother exclaimed, as Roger and the other visitor, Paul, carried the crate to the porch.

"Where'd you get her, Rog?" asked Joe.

"I raised her myself," was the proud reply.

The road was pretty rough and Bella grunted and snorted at every bump and jolt, but at last it was over and they drove up to the front porch.

anything. She's awful tame. But we can take her around all right if you say so."

"Never mind," replied his aunt, "she's too heavy for you boys to carry."

Roger then began prying open the crate while everyone stood around and watched with interest. The noise of the prying and the jar as each side was taken off seemed to dash Bella, who lay still staring into space.

"Stop her!" cried Aunt Gertrude, giving her a gentle prod. "Get up and go to the barn."

Up went Bella's ears, while her little eyes rolled around.

"Go on!" screamed Mildred. "She looks kind of crazy or something!"

For a moment Bella crouched there, then all of a sudden she jumped up and scuttled out of the box, grunting so loudly that Jig, the dog, died in terror.

"This way, Bella, this way," yelled Roger, pointing down the steps. But Bella paid no heed. In fact she made a fierce dive in the other direction.

Joe happened to be in the way. He stood with his feet wide apart and his hands on his knees—a favorite attitude when he was watching something interesting. Bella must have taken him for an archway because she plunged madly between his legs.

Eek! Eek! Jig fell square on her back. "Stop her!" cried Aunt Gertrude. "Oh my! She's in the house!"

Everybody dashed after the frightened pig, but Bella dodged them all and ran into an open door. It was the door of a bed room which was on the first floor, and which Mildred and Gert were using. Bella found it quiet in there and so she decided to creep under the bed and rest awhile.

Meanwhile there was a wild search going on which was at last given up and Bella had a long nap in place.

The first thing she knew she was being disturbed by talking and laughing. Gert and Bella were getting ready for bed. Luckily she couldn't understand what they were saying about pigs. My! How hungry the poor creature was!

"It smells terribly musty in here, but, of course, it's a very old house and the plaster is all falling down," remarked Gert.

Just then Mildred began to scream. "Look!" she cried. "A snake!"

So it was, curled up on the rug. The girls of the girls brought Aunt Gertrude and the cook, but just as they all came in Bella, who was famished, spied the delicious morsel on the rug.

Out she darted from her hiding place and before anyone could say Jack Robinson, she was trampling that snake. In two more shakes the snake was no more. It had gone down Bella's hungry throat.

"Did you see that?" cried Mildred. "The pig saved our lives! I'm sure!"

"The pig saved our lives!" cried Mildred. "The pig saved our lives!"

"The pig saved our lives!" cried Mildred. "The pig saved our lives!"

"The pig saved our lives!" cried Mildred. "The pig saved our lives!"

"The pig saved our lives!" cried Mildred. "The pig saved our lives!"

"The pig saved our lives!" cried Mildred. "The pig saved our lives!"

"The pig saved our lives!" cried Mildred. "The pig saved our lives!"

"The pig saved our lives!" cried Mildred. "The pig saved our lives!"

"The pig saved our lives!" cried Mildred. "The pig saved our lives!"

"The pig saved our lives!" cried Mildred. "The pig saved our lives!"

"Why, she's quite a heroine!" exclaimed Gertrude, admiringly.

"Good, pig!" said Aunt Gertrude. "I did think we couldn't keep her, but now we must if she destroys snakes. Roger! Roger! The pig is found! Come and let's find a place for her."

"She can stay here," said Gert generously, but it was decided that the barn was best for a pig, even a heroine one.

AN ANECDOTE

ONE day as Tsar Peter was returning from a hunting trip he happened to loiter behind the rest of his party to enjoy the cool air.

As he rode thus alone he saw a boy standing on the top bar of a gate looking up and down the road. The Tsar rode up to him and said briskly, "Well, what are you looking for, my boy?"

"Please your honor," said the boy, "I'm looking out for the king."

"Oh," said the Tsar, "if you will get up behind me I will show him to you." The boy did as he was bid and as they were riding along the Tsar said, "You will know the Emperor by seeing the red tusk of his nose to him."

Soon after they came up to the party, who were much surprised to see their king thus attended and immediately saluted him. Whereupon the king turned his head and said: "Now do you see who is the king?"

"Why," replied the boy archly, "it is one of us two, but I am sure I do not know which, for both of us have our tusks on."

The king was so much pleased with the wit that he took him into his service, and this same lad rose to be one of the generals in the Russian army.

WHEN YOU GO CAMPING

IT is always a good thing when you go on a camping trip to know how to build a fire. Remember these simple rules, and you will have the knowledge to make yourself popular on that next camping trip.

Never build a fire near any foliage or in a place where it is likely to spread to nearby trees or shrubs. It is always a good plan to build a small pit of stones in which you can safely lay your twigs for a good start.

Around this pit cleared of any leaves or twigs that might catch fire. The first thing to have to build a camp fire is a good sized box of matches.

The second thing to have is a stock of dry paper to lay at the bottom of your fire for a good start. On top of the paper lay small dry twigs loosely together so that a draft can get in under the twigs and then light your fire from the bottom. If most of the twigs are wet from last night's rain, do not be discouraged, but look for a large fallen tree and the chances are that under its broad trunk you will find hidden some dry twigs and shreds of bark that you can use for kindling. And now your fire is lit and you can gather around to toast your marshmallows or broil your chops and your camping trip will be voted a success.

THE JUNIOR COOK

HOW TO SERVE WATERMELON

If your family and whole or half slices of watermelon rather than to serve at the dinner table try this method of serving.

Chill the melon some hours before using.

Just before dinner, cut the melon into inch slices. (If only a half of a melon is needed cover the cut end with the other half with paraffin paper and put back into the ice box immediately.

Trim the rind off the slices. Cut each slice crossways into inch sized pieces.

Pile the pieces into frappe cups and set on a tray in the refrigerator.

When ready to serve carry the tray at once to the table and serve. Watermelon should be very cold when eaten.

This makes a very dainty, pretty company dessert and is very little trouble.

Fashion's Fancies

KNITTED BLOUSE AND DRESS HERE

Indications Are That Garments of This Type Will Be Autumn Favorites.

STRIKING COLORS ARE USED

Rich Yellow, Striped With Black or Blue—Attractive Tones of Lavender, Mauve, Violet and the Charming Blue-Green.

Among the special things that Paris has provided for summer wear are knitted sweaters in artificial silk, silk and wool and in silk and metal. From a standpoint of fashion, observes a correspondent, woman will not accept the mannish sports sweater. The smart Parisienne wants something more dressy and more becoming. With her, the sweater blouse is worn to take the place of a blouse or silk blouse and is not intended to be removed as our sweaters are, consequently it is not nearly so much of a real sports garment.

A well known designer in Paris, who was at one time a premiere in one of the big dressmaking shops, has established herself as an authority on the subject of the best and most artistic in this type of sweater blouse. She has placed her models successfully with prominent dressmakers who are receiving a great many orders for them.

Some of the best of these models, just received from Paris, are all of the knitted blouse type.

We have had knitted blouses and knitted dresses for some time, but they, like everything else, are one of the things which fashion takes up casually and as casually lays aside, until some day one of these hitherto carelessly considered articles of dress suddenly becomes a decided craze, often lasting much longer than its most optimistic sponsors hoped for. There is every indication that the knitted blouse and the knitted dress and suit will be prominent for autumn, so that it is quite safe to stock one's wardrobe with them.

Tailored Suits in Small Gray Checks. Although French women recently have shown an unusual amount of enthusiasm over certain types of tailored suits, their conception of a sport suit is quite different from that of the English woman or the American. The Parisienne likes the soft woollens in light shades and with considerable adornment.

In suits of knitted fabrics, any number of which are being made up, not only for immediate wear but for autumn and winter showing, the French observe the conservative coat and skirt type, preferring those of the skirt and jumper or overcoat sort. Although little variety is seen in the cut, much of it is introduced in other and more unusual ways. For instance, if the sport suits, which was among the new fabrics this spring will be even more popular as the season advances. The pattern resembles the surface of a waffle iron with its alternating one-quarter-inch squares of crumpled and plain material. It may be had in all the bright shades of the modern sport costume, as well as dark colors.

Silk With Metal and Wool. Heavy silk sweaters recently imported by prominent American firms have wool used in combination with the silk in an altogether new way. I have in mind a model of this sort which is knitted of corn-colored silk. The wool takes the form of a variegated floral border around the neck, the short flowing sleeves and the bottom.

The lovely yellow and silver sweater blouse called Bouton d'Or shows much the same treatment in metal and silk, the silver bands being placed on the collar, around the sleeves and bottom and forming the belt. The metal is knitted in the front in a rather complicated way.

Reverting to the type of suit referred to previously as being one which has taken a tremendous hold on the public taste at the present time, it is interesting not only as a fashion but as illustrative of the continuously varying demand which gives rise to the mushroom success from time to time of quite obscure dressmakers and the equally sudden fall of others. In the proportion that they are able to create a new type or popularize an old one at the crucial moment when that particular style happens, for some reason or another, to please the public to an unusual degree.

At the present time O'Rosen, the tailor, is a big competitor of the dressmaker. There is nothing striking about the suit which has been his greatest success. It consists of a straight skirt and a coat almost exactly like the oldtime riding-habit jacket with snug-fitting coat sleeves, small collar and long revers to the waistline where one button is placed in link form. The coat has a slight flare. To be absolutely what is demanded at the moment the suit must be of a lightweight gray checked material, the checks being so small that they are almost invisible.

Vest Blouses Come Into Prominence. The popularity of the suit, of course, creates a like demand for blouses. This is always welcome news to the blouse makers, who, having the variable winds of fashion so seldom fill their sails during the last few years, are on the alert to take advantage of everything that will stimulate their business. Consequently they are bending all their energies toward creating pleasing models.

The great popularity of the tailored suit brings to the market a new type of the vest blouse. All of the smart shops now are specializing in these, and among the most chic of the recent models is the gilet blouse, the front of which is developed in soft pearl gray knit embroidered in blue. It has the back and sleeves of pearl gray georgette.

In almost every instance the gilet blouse has the back and sleeves of a contrasting material, usually of a sheerer fabric than that used for the front. Double-breasted vest blouses of the mannish type have fronts of embroidered silk with sleeves and back of sheer organdy. Madeleine et Madeleine have made some charming blouses of the gilet sort from white satin and embroidered them in copper and black.

NOVEL POCKETBOOKS ARE FAD

Accessories Feature Brilliant Linings and Colorful Substances—Round Knob Fasteners.

Among the accessories for summer use are many interesting pocketbooks. Some of these reflect the inspiration of Egypt in their exquisitely carved mountings. Brilliant linings are a feature of these novelties.

There are attractive bags made of blue tulle silk. One is fastened with a beautiful wickerwork cameo. The lining of coral silk is edged with a border of variegated flowers. Others are finished with round knob fasteners that are most effective. These are made from various colorful substances, the most elaborate being inlaid with real stones.

suit is of brushed wool it is made up wrong side out; that is, with the brushed side on the inside of the garment and the plain side out. This gives the desired warmth for outdoor games in winter and also has a practical idea back of it. You'll know the unpleasantness of having twigs and leaves as well as dust catch on the surface of a brushed wool garment.

Most interesting suits consisting of a skirt, high-necked overblouse with a smart matching tie and a little hat or cap, all knitted, are being shown by exclusive firms featuring sport clothing. These will be worn in the mountains this summer and will doubtless prove among the most popular suits for country wardrobes next winter.

Striking are the colors and color combinations seen in these. There are rich yellow striped with black, the stripes being placed so that they form a band around the bottom of the skirt and on the ends of the scarf or necktie. Yellow also may be striped with a blue. Then there are beautiful tones of lavender, mauve and violet and a charming blue-green of the shade that may often be seen in the woods in midsummer.
